

PROFESSIONAL FACILITATOR

Control of the workshop is necessary to manage the issues – to allocate time for instruction and application, and to allow the teams time to learn the methodology and also understand the “live” projects. This control must take the form of subtle guidance. The workshop facilitator, usually a Certified Value Specialist (CVS) must develop and encourage an environment of creativity, free-thinking and “open-mindedness.” If the principle objective of the workshop is the solution of the issue, the outcome must yield the expected results. If the objective of the workshop is to only learn the methodology, then the agenda can be less flexible. This will be controlled by the professional Value facilitator.
